Recent EPA re-registration eligibility decisions have significantly changed regulations associated with the use of certain soil fumigant products including: metam sodium, chloropicrin, methyl bromide, and metam potassium.

The University of Arizona Cooperative Extension in collaboration with Arizona Department of Agriculture and Industry Representatives will provide critical information related to new regulations including buffer zones, fumigant management plans, good agricultural practices, respirator requirements, etc.

This training session will be of interest to all persons involved in soil fumigant applications, including handlers, applicators (both custom and private). Turf renovations being considered in the future that include fumigation will require adherence to new label requirements.

RSVP before April 13 to Kai Umeda so lunch can be arranged.

There is no fee to attend.

Please share this announcement with all interested parties.
